My Bathroom wishlist

Tied by Russa Nerhas

A bathroom oasis should be a place of peace and relaxation. With the big question of “What’s next for bathroom trends in 2012”, we’ve decided to chat with Canaroma Bath & Tile, Canada’s leading importers of bath and tile products for over 30 years.

According to Patricia Ee, Sales and Marketing Director at Canaroma, “People are looking for art pieces rather than ordinary bathroom fixtures. They want something different, meaning never seen before shapes and finishes for both the tub and vanity.”

TILES

Wall textures and colours are key elements of comfortable and stylish bathrooms. The ceramic Carrara 12”x35” wall tile and the porcelain Carrara 24”x24” floor tile from the Classic Carrara Blanco Marble line, actually appear as Carrara Marble, but the smooth polished finish makes cleaning simple and the grout is barely visible thanks to the large tile format and rectified edges.

Prism Bianco is another new tile for 2012. This three-dimensional, smooth textured décor is both unique and stunning. Each square exudes its own small pyramid shape, and when shown as a whole can become a striking pattern. This pattern is perfect for a bathroom, foyer wall, running beside a staircase and even a kitchen backsplash. Grease and other foods are a breeze to wipe off of Prism Bianco Tiles.

TUBS

The new tub coming out from Victoria + Albert is called “The Edge”. Strikingly linear contrasted with soft contoured corners, this double ended design is perfect for two people. To complement the tub, Victoria + Albert also offers a white rimless basin which mirrors the tub’s shape. Both pieces are made of volcanic limestone and hand finished.
