STEPPING INTO THIS 22ND-FLOOR PENTHOUSE BATHROOM, THE AMAZING VIEWS OF THE ATLANTA SKYLINE TAKE CENTER STAGE.

So it's easy to understand why the views helped sell designer Matthew Quinn and his partner, Ric Parrish, on the space. "Ric and I were visiting the building with a friend who was interested in moving, and we flipped out over the views," Matthew says. Needless to say, they were the ones who did the moving—and they created a stylish bathroom that gives the stunning city view a run for its money.

The star attraction of the bathroom is a contemporary freestanding tub that's placed on a pedestal two steps up from the rest of the bathroom. Surrounded by windows, the tub offers the perfect place to soak up surrounding views. "We were able to build this glass conservatory for the bathtub, which gives us the feeling of bathing outside," Matthew says. The tub itself is from Matthew's Intarcia collection and features a flared, contemporary style. "Growing up around boats in Key West definitely influenced the lines of this tub," Matthew says.

If time doesn't allow for a luxurious soak, Matthew and Ric can step into the spacious steam shower, which anchors one long wall of the bathroom. With a built-in bench, multiple showerheads, and built-in storage niches, it seamlessly blends smart function and spa-like pampering. Silver-veined travertine brings dramatic veining and color variation to the shower surfaces and repeats the material used on the steps up to the focal-point tub.

A large-scale anthracite porcelain tile brings bold contrast to the floor and connects the shower to the vanity on the bathroom's opposite wall. Here, sleek cabinet fronts show off a mix of high-gloss lacquer and wood finishes. Above-counter square sinks are from the same design collection as the tub and repeat its flared sides for dramatic effect. Sleek cabinet pulls add to the modern look, while tall mirrored medicine cabinets above each sink hold everyday grooming items as well as electrical outlets. The interior of the vanity cabinets features smart storage that Matthew finds just as pleasing as any of the bathroom's stylish elements. "I find peace when I open my vanity drawers with custom plexiglass inserts and see individual compartments for dental floss, ChapStick, scissors, nail clippers, and cotton balls," he says.

From the smallest detail to the large sweeps of stone tile, this bathroom seems to have it all: smart function, high style, and amazing city views. The only surprising thing is how Matthew and Ric manage to leave the room at all.

1 Built-in niches add smart storage in the shower; they're backed by mosaic tile that repeats on the shower floor. A built-in bench pairs practical function and style. 2 Travertine steps create a pedestal for the focal-point tub, which features a contemporary design with flared lines. Linen curtains add softness to the tub alcove; just beyond, a rooftop deck offers another way to enjoy the city views. 3 High-gloss lacquer drawers lend a stylish look to the vanity. Inside, plexiglass inserts keep small items organized. 4 A narrow hallway at one side of the shower leads to a separate toilet compartment. Textured walls lend subtle drama. 5 The tub filler's chrome finish repeats in glimmering accents around the room.
