new york's finest

Nine months later, it most definitely was. Doing away with the divider between the kitchen and the living-dining room opened everything up. Walls painted a very gallery-esque matte white serve as the backdrop for contemporary paintings, sculptures, and works on paper, and an equally stunning collection of mid-century furniture, much of it Brazilian, looks right at home on the stained-walnut floorboards.

The transformation is perhaps most dramatic in the bathrooms, reconfigured and reapointed. Merging the master bathroom with an adjacent closet and going all-out with the Calacatta gold marble—walls and floor, plus a single slab topping the double sink vanity—yielded a luxurious feel. “Almost like a Roman bath,” Robles says.
