COLOR CODED

Contemporary design is surging in the bath, but which colors complement the style? According to the NKBA 2017 trend report, white, off-white, and gray dominate.

"Contemporary and transitional styles fully support the monochromatic palettes that use shades of white and gray," says Stephanie Pierce, director of design and trends for MasterBrand Cabinets. She adds, "Black accent colors in hardware and faucets as a contrast or on either the surfaces or vanities are a nice way to create striking contrast in small spaces while maintaining the clean and airy feel often associated with both of these styles."

The report reveals that blues are emerging, with younger designers opting for violet and purple tones. "As the spa bathroom trend continues due to people caring more about the bathroom experience in general, colors like soft blues, greens, and violets translate really well—they invoke a sense of calmness," says Sue Wadden, director of color marketing at Sherwin-Williams.

Gold and brushed brass are gaining ground when it comes to faucets, leading Wadden to believe that "deeper, darker hues in the bathroom are going to emerge. The combination of dark walls and golden and copper metals are really moving in, and the look is beautiful for the bathroom."
