ONE OF THE many advantages of a new bath build is the homeowner's ability to put a unique stamp on the space and have it designed to every point on his or her wish list. Wanting to have a bath fit for the cover of design magazines, this homeowner scoured both national and international publications, pulling more than 50 photographs, each with different design elements. Armed with this design knowledge, she worked with Peter Salerno, CMKBD, of Peter Salerno Inc. to create a master bath dedicated solely to her whims and needs. Salerno took all her needs, wants, and ideas and melded them to design a bath that was both spectacular and functional.

Although a new build, the space did come with some design challenges. A few examples: A tight entrance, tall ceilings, limited available light sources, and location all required solutions. To address these, Salerno designed the main vanity to taper at each end, creating better clearance by the door and tub area. Soffit was created over the corner tub to visually bring the eye down. In addition, a shallow soffit over the mirror allows the placement of three low-voltage lights. Two wall sconces are located on either side of the mirror for even lighting. Following the idea that the space should be purposeful as well as beautiful, removable doors on the tub fascia allow for maintenance of the Bainultra Meridian Series tub.

The Craft-Maid cabinetry includes square raised-panel doors with raised-slab drawers in maple paint and sesame seed color glaze. Invoking a touch of luxury, Salerno chose Alexander Gold limestone flooring. Salerno built upon his client's vision by bringing all these elements together, creating a truly tailor-made design. «

LOCATED IN OLD Greenwich, Connecticut, these homeowners built their home to be the talk of the neighborhood, with the crown jewel being their luxurious master bath. One of six bathrooms in the home, this room stands apart thanks to the design of Jennifer Howard of JWH Design & Cabinetry. Howard worked with the homeowners to create a light and elegant space with an organized vanity, surplus storage, a separate room for the water closet, and a large steam shower with an interior “window.”

Although the home was a new-build, this did not exempt Howard from having to overcome the space’s design challenges. One of the biggest hurdles for her team was creating balance and symmetry with the room’s large bow windows and vaulted ceiling. The many windows and interior doors were creating a choppy layout that didn’t vibe with the feeling of tranquility she wanted to create. As a solution, Howard shifted the location of the main entry door from the bedroom into the bathroom. This allowed the team to center the Kallista tub in front of the windows and design the opposite full wall for the double sinks, elegant mirror surrounds, and side-mounted sconces for ample light. The radius front on the sink cabinets adds visual interest to the long wall of cabinetry and reflects the curved window wall.

In addition to the custom cabinetry in furniture-grade walnut, one of the highlights of the room is the stone accent throughout the space, created by blending three stones together—Calacatta, Blanco Marma, and Thassos. The mirror mosaic was laid as a “rug” detail in the center of the room and then repeated on the main wall of the shower—design details that exude elegance in this beautiful bath. «
