2019's Top Door Trends

Be it evolving end-user needs—including more flexible spaces—bringing the outdoors in, or just adding in a touch of home, panache is winning the day when it comes to portals and porticos.

Basix Headquarters

Axelrod Design's 2018 AIA SF Merit Award winner exemplifies a top 2019 door trend. The space is divided by fixed and moving glass partitions to provide for the perpetual movement and changing combinations of today's flexible office.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Supported by manufacturers, utilities, industry experts and academia, the Smart Water Networks Forum (SWAN) is driving awareness and adoption of data-driven solutions in the water and wastewater sectors. As global water challenges continue to mount, the forum is actively promoting technology and smart water solutions to support the need for more resilient cities. In our water savers' coverage, Brown and Caldwell is the newest company to lend its water infrastructure planning and design expertise to SWAN's expanding resources.

The full-service environmental engineering and construction firm recently launched BC Blue, a smart utility approach to efficiently manage and operate water, wastewater and stormwater utilities. The program equips end-users with tools, user-friendly interfaces, improved data quality and artificial intelligence-enhanced analytics for enhanced utility performance.
