going green

A high-angle photograph of a vast, modern indoor garden. The space is filled with a variety of lush green plants, including palm trees and broad-leafed tropical species, arranged in raised wooden planters. A light-colored, winding path leads through the garden. In the center of the path, a person in dark clothing is walking away from the camera. The garden is housed within a large, glass-enclosed structure with a complex metal framework. Two circular, glass-enclosed structures with wooden tops are visible on the left and right sides of the garden. The background shows a cityscape through the glass walls.
