Whether used on a closet or chest of drawers—or even in a bathroom—these decorative hardware pieces provide that extra-special flair to a hotel guestroom.

A / The Organic Collection from Rocky Mountain Hardware is made up of four grips/pulls that come in a variety of sizes and bronze finishes. "While designing these pieces, I sought to create a multi-surface hardware collection that highlights a minimalistic design with an organic shape that molds to your hand," explained Christian Nickum, the company's president. B / Boasting the organic look of raw plumbing parts, WaterBridge cabinet pulls from Sonoma Forge complement the company's faucet line of the same name. "Along with a lock that stands out in the bathroom with a distinctively rustic flair, our accessories expertly blend function with form to ensure a seamless appearance and long-lasting performance," noted Erik Ambjor, president, Sonoma Forge.

C / Ashley Norton's Urban Suite collection of geometric shapes now comes in Satin Brass, a finish that leans toward the matte side with a slightly dark gold hue. "Each design adds subtle drama to any space, especially when paired with the new Satin Brass finish," said Ashish Karnani, VP, Ashley Norton. "And, since the Wave, Leaf and Box pull designs cover any preexisting holes, they're a great choice when refurbishing cabinets." D / California Faucets' Deluxe Grab Bars line can integrate into any style of bath. The collection of 10 distinctive styles is available in seven lengths and more than 28 artisan finishes. "If a chameleon used a grab bar, it would be one of ours," said Noah Taft, the company's chief marketing officer. E / Produced in Europe, Viaggio Hardware's luxury door locks are equipped with the company's Concealed Screw Mechanism (CSM) for a streamlined lock without exposed screws. A selection of five finishes—bright chrome, satin black, satin brass, satin nickel and titanium gray—can be mixed and matched. "Drawing inspiration from the modern architecture of northern Italy and the fashion capital of Milan, Viaggio pairs fluid lines and natural textures to create an extraordinary line of hardware," said William Metzger, general manager.
